Dear Prof Digraskar

As per the Bank norms, the client change the Procurement as per the need of the project but within the frame work of World Bank guidelines. As the procurement plan in each institut on is drawn from the Institutional Development Plans (IDPs) approved by BoGs and MHRD/NPIU and reviewed by Bank technical teams; and as the entire procurement for the project duration is inputted into PMSS in the very beginning, many changes cannot be anticipated in items procured, except mainly for quantity variations due to price fluctuations. To that extent, it is fine with Bank if the institutions revise their Procurement Plan when they consider necessary, with the approval of their BoGs, provided it does not contradict the overall procurement framework agreed in the financial agreement for this project and are within the activities approved by BoG and MHRD/NPIU.

This may be brought to the notice of various stakeholders including BoGs of institutions.
